Adds the value of the current sensor to a register in the PIC’s memory. Depending on the direction of the current through the current sensor, the integrated current will either be incremented (charging) or decremented (discharging) because the current sensor returns a positive value when charging and a negative value when discharging.