

Block III Workshops 2:10-3:00

Alumni Roundtable Discussion

Meet with members of the alumni panel in small, unstructured group discussions. This is a great chance to ask your personal questions and learn everything you can from these outstanding panelists.

Leaderless Leadership

The Orpheus Chamber Orchestra has garnered worldwide acclaim for their flawless recitations of beloved classical compositions – and they do not have a conductor! Join in on a workshop discussing the prospect of group function and “self-directed” leadership teams.

Ellis Finger, Director of the Williams Center

Situational Leadership: Navigating the Rough Waters of Peer Interaction

Taking corrective, leadership actions in casual situations can feel awkward. Come listen to a presentation on how to navigate peer intervention and learn various strategies for addressing behavior in a variety of social contexts, from informal settings like lounging around with friends, to structured settings like sports teams and Greek chapters.

Connor Heinlein '15

Registration and Breakfast
9:30-10:00

Marquis Hall Lobby and Bergethon Room

Keynote Address

10:00-10:40

Leading From Behind

Alma Scott-Buczak '74 has excelled in creating highly organized, effective professional teams throughout her career — she believes strongly that the best leaders are able to create environments where they can “lead from behind.” Join us as Ms. Scott-Buczak shares her inspiring and unique sentiments on this invaluable style of leadership.

Block I Workshops

10:50-11:40

Keynote Follow-up

We invite you to join this follow-up discussion with Ms. Scott-Buczak. Ask your personal questions, and learn as much as you can from her wealth of experience.

What's Your Brand of Leadership? How Values Shape Your Leadership Style

What word comes to mind when you think of Steve Job's leadership style? What about Gandhi's? Martha Stewart's? Martin Luther King Jr.'s? Each of these leaders has been shaped by his or her deeply-held values — these values have helped to create their unique leadership brand which determined their message, direction, and influence in their own sphere. In this workshop, we will determine our own values, and construct our personal leadership brand around them.

Margie Cherry, Assistant Director, Alumni Career Services

The Art of Perception: Perception of Leadership

The Art of Perception analyzes works of art to illustrate that information necessary for effective leadership is readily available through astute perception, but also that effective communication is equally critical for success. In this program, leaders are encouraged to revisit their observation skills and reconsider how they convey both vision and strategy.

Amy Herman '88, President, The Art of Perception

Saying “Yes” to “No”

It is often in our nature as driven leaders to try and balance as many activities as possible, but we may end up spread too thin. Join three current students for a discussion surrounding time management, prioritizing, sensibly limiting your volume of activities, and ultimately, how to say “no”.

Jessica Siverman '14

Alec Golini '14

Max Ma '14

Block II Workshops

11:50-12:40

An Academic Backbone for Leadership: The Social Change Model

Contrary to popular belief, leadership is not an elusive, indefinite topic. Academic research has yielded many different leadership models — and understanding one of these models will give you a solid basis for further leadership exploration! The most widely used model among colleges and universities is the Social Change Model — come attend this session to learn about the 7 C's of social change.

Leah Godin '14

Matthew McKenzie '14

Text vs TKT: Communications in the 21st Century

Let's examine the implications of cross-generational communications for a fresh take on an essential topic: learn about Baby Boomers, Veterans, and Generations Y and X with an interactive session featuring background information and group discussion on various communications styles.

Rachel Moeller, Director of Alumni Relations

Carlos Barata '14

Congruence: Living Your Leadership Values

We all possess a personal moral compass which informs and directs the decisions we make — yet sometimes, leadership roles require we challenge or act outside of these values. How do we fairly reconcile what we believe in with what is asked of us?

*Alex Hendrickson, College Chaplain and Director of Religious and Spiritual Life
John McKnight, Dean of Intercultural Development*

Pumped Up, Dialed Down: Linking Stress, Rest, and Good Leadership

This workshop assumes the only thing you really do 24/7 is breathe. We will explore the too often ignored issue of how stress, rest and leadership are related, examining reasons and strategies for refueling your leadership tank. We'll discuss “smart stress” and “smart rest,” and develop a personal plan for keeping your leadership strong through the power of taking a break.

Dr. Mary Armstrong, Chair, Women's and Gender Studies

Lunch and Alumni Panel

12:40-2:00

Following a buffet lunch, a panel of highly successful alumni will take the stage to discuss their experiences at Lafayette, and how those experiences have translated into incredible professional narratives.
