Course Description

This is an upper-level seminar investigating the role of Latino immigrants in the U.S. political system. The course will begin with an analysis of patterns of Latino immigration and theories of immigration. Next, we examine when and how both citizen and non-citizen Latinos engage in politics and to what extent these groups influence political outcomes. In particular, we will assess the affect that Latinos had on the 2012 election and how this growing population will shape politics and policy in the future.

With the aid of literature in political science, economics, and sociology, and data on public opinion, voting, and legislative behavior, the class will attempt to answer questions such as: “Why are Latinos immigrating to the United States and where are they coming from?” and “How will the two main political parties approach the Latino immigrant population post-2012?” We will take a behavioral approach to analyze the public opinion and political participation of Latino citizens and non-citizens and then work to assess the institutional consequences of the Latino immigrant presence. In addition, the course will examine how native-born American citizens react to Latino immigration and how the preferences of whites, blacks, and native Latinos are reflected in both pro- and anti-immigrant policy.

Overall, this course is designed to take an interdisciplinary approach to the study of Latino immigration. The goal is for students to integrate various theories and ideas in order to gain a more comprehensive view of Latino immigrants and their role in politics today.

Learning Outcomes

By the end of this course students should be able to:

- Explain patterns of Latino immigration historically and today
- Analyze economic, social, and psychological theories of immigration generally and Latino immigration specifically
- Understand and apply theories of Latino politics and political behavior
- Assess real data on the public opinion, political participation, and political representation of non-citizen and citizen Latinos
- Develop and revise a research paper that addresses a question concerning Latino immigrants in the American political system
Course Prerequisites: GOVT 101 plus one from GOVT 207, 211, 215, 227, 258, 315, HIST 275 or permission from the instructor

Required Texts/Moodle

- You are not required to purchase any textbooks for this course. All articles and chapters will be available electronically on the course Moodle site found at: http://moodle.lafayette.edu/. If you do not have a Moodle site for this course or if you have trouble logging in, please let me know ASAP!!

Expectations and Assignments

• Discussion Questions and Participation

- STARTING SEPTEMBER 9th!!! Before each class, students are expected to submit 2 written questions to the Moodle course site. These questions should try to clarify, challenge, expand, or otherwise synthesize the material discussed in class and in the readings. All students must read the questions posed by their peers and be prepared to discuss these questions in class. Participation will be graded on the student’s level of preparedness and the depth of their engagement with the material.

  - On a given day you will receive a participation score ranging from 0 to 3. My rubric is as follows:
    - 0: No participation
    - 1: Little participation (surface level engagement, little command of the material)
    - 2: Moderate to active participation (deeper engagement, solid understanding of the material)
    - 3: Active participation (asking challenging questions, going to the extra mile to understand and analyze the material)

  - Note on Attendance: You may have one unexcused absence without penalty. Beyond this, each unexcused absence will result in a 5% deduction from your final participation grade.

- In addition to classwork, students are expected to attend and engage in assigned out-of-classroom activities. These will include two campus/local events related to the material discussed in this course, video nights (dates TBA), and required office hour/librarian/writing center visits. These activities contribute to the four credit hour requirement for this course.

  - If you have an excused absence for a scheduled out-of-class activity, you must meet with me to discuss a make-up assignment.

• Writing Component

- Two analytical papers: (5-6 pages, excluding the bibliography) will address major concepts covered in the course. You will choose to write on two of a choice of three paper topics. A detailed description of the assignment will be posted on Moodle and discussed in class.

- Paper 1: Due September 25th
- Paper 2: Due October 16th
- Paper 3: Due November 13th

- Final research paper: The final project in this class will be a research paper, which will address a question (of your choosing) dealing with the role of Latino immigrants in American politics. There are 6 components of the research paper assignment that will happen sequentially (Note: these dates are subject to change based on the pace of the class and student preparedness):

  1) Propose a research question (due October 21st)
  2) Submit annotated bibliography (due November 6th)
  3) Develop a rough draft (due November 22nd)
  4) Participate in a writing workshop (November 25th)
  5) Submit a final paper (12-15 double-spaced pages, 1 inch margins, 12-point font) (due on Final Exam day: TBA)
  6) Give a 10-15 minute in-class presentation on your final paper during the last week of class

- Notes on Grading

  o Any student who is not satisfied with a grade on a given assignment must submit, in writing, a description of the issue in dispute (i.e. what is allegedly mis-graded and why you believe your work is correct). If necessary, I will set up a meeting with the student to discuss the issue. I will then decide whether to raise, lower, or leave the grade unchanged.

  o All late assignments will be docked one full letter grade for every day they are late. Make sure you turn in everything on time.
