“Spaces of Equality: Facing a Pandemic”

PRESENTED BY ERIC KLINENBERG

April 22, 6:30 p.m. to 8:00 p.m.

How can social infrastructure help in the fight against significant challenges facing humanity? How can social solidarity help in context of facing a pandemic? In his plenary, Eric Klinenberg offers a timely and empathetic blueprint for change, showing how social solidarity and infrastructure can help solve some of humanity’s most pressing challenges: isolation, poverty, inequality and the decline of civic life.

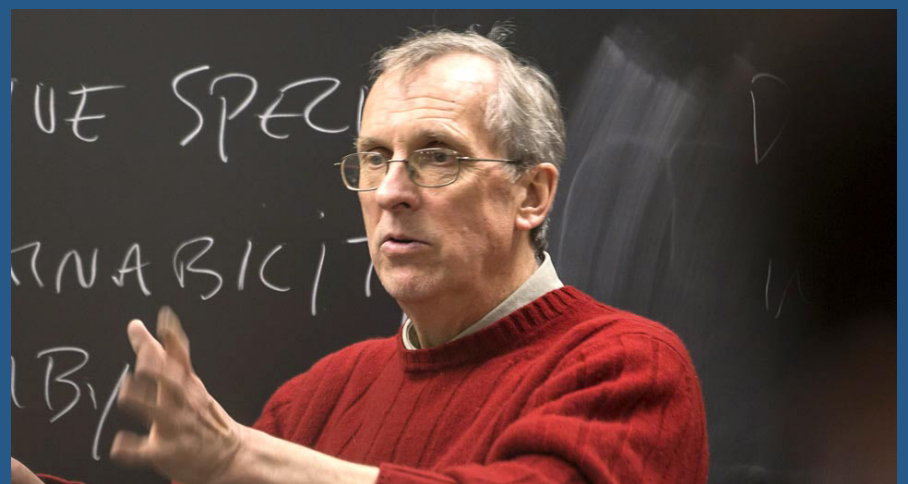

Over the past 50 years, shared spaces have created diverse organizations that have shaped the Lehigh Valley. As we face the pandemic, and social distancing, societies must draw on each other to survive. In addition to social distancing, the interdependence between individuals and across groups may fray but are vital to our survival and cannot be broken.

JOHN V. REYNOLDS

Beloved husband, father, and professor of political science, John V. Reynolds lived, worked, and taught fueled by fierce commitment to fairness and an uncompromising belief in what was right. As an educator, he used the study of American politics to show students how to question, analyze, and trust the power of institutions to preserve democracy.
